BA CANCEL FLIGHTS TO AND FROM NBO

British Airways has suspended passenger flights between the United Kingdom and Kenya after Nairobi banned all flights from Britain to retaliate a move by London to add the country on its travel 'red list'.

An exception is made for British or Irish passport holders or people with UK residence rights. But they must first pay to quarantine in a government-approved hotel for 10 days.

The airline said Thursday the suspension of operations would see passengers who had booked tickets after April 9, to travel between the two destinations entitled to a full refund. British Airways stated affected passengers could also take a voucher for the value of their fare for future travel up to April 30, 2023.

WHAT IT MEANS TO BE FULLY VACCINATED?

According to the CDC, you're not considered fully vaccinated until it's been at least two weeks since your second dose of a two-dose series like Pfizer's or AstraZeneca's vaccine, or it's been two weeks since you received a single-dose vaccine like Johnson & Johnson's.

The CDC stress that if it's been less than two weeks since you received a single-dose vaccine or you haven't received your second dose in the series, you are NOT fully protected. That means you still need to take all of the necessary precautions like wearing a mask, washing your hands and avoiding large crowds.
